Music at the Advent: 2022 Event Schedule

The Advent Church has long been a place where family and community gathered to share music and food. The wonderful acoustics of this 1849 building still echo the legacy of generations of hymn tunes and musical talent. The newspaper columns and diaries of Emma Confer Watson chronicled hymn sings at the church, family songfests at camp, birthday parties, quilting bees, and dinners. Bringing music back to the Advent Church continues this legacy of singing and socializing. Special thanks to Jeffery Watson, Chair of the Music Committee, for his leadership and musical expertise to launch this new program.

All events will be held at the historic Advent Church at 1303 Moose Run Rd., Bellefonte, PA 16823. Following each concert will be a social hour with refreshments and opportunity to visit the on-site Museum and tour the Advent Cemetery.

Remembering Family

Millerites in Pennsylvania: Centre County's Advent Churches

"Millerites in Pennsylvania," researched and written by Barbara Franco, President of the Advent Historical Society, was published in the Winter 2022 edition of the journal Pennsylvania History: A Journal of Mid-Atlantic Studies. Her research documents the important role of Centre County's Advent churches, including the "Advent Chapel at Mash (Marsh) Creek." Following are excerpted passages from the published article.

By summer 1847 interest was strong enough to organize a camp meeting "on the land of Col. Greig, five miles above Milesburg." Andrew Gregg, Jr. (1799–1869) was a prominent ironmaster, businessman, and politician in Centre County and an owner of the Harmony Forge in Milesburg, in partnership with James Irvin (1800–1862). It is not clear whether Gregg himself was interested in the Advent message or whether he supported the effort on behalf of his employees and the community. During the 1847 camp meeting, Lemuel Osler preached at the Methodist Church in Milesburg and "while there, we were kindly entertained by Col Greigh, a gentleman of influence and wealth." Census records confirm that some of the Centre County Adventists worked as forgemen and colliers, while others were local farmers. Thomas Watson (1780–1857), a former collier who later retired to farming, was active in local politics and was one of the early converts along with his numerous sons and daughters and their spouses. His son George Watson worked as an iron forgerman as did sons-in-law Robert McMullen and William Stanley; Perry Aikens was a wagonmaker and Joseph Eckley a farmer.

A year later at the camp meeting in 1849, two Advent ministers, J. W. Bonham and Josiah Litch, described the proceedings which ended with the dedication of the Advent Chapel at Marsh Creek, making it one of the earliest churches built specifically for Second Advent worship.

On Lord's-day, Sept. 2d, the new Advent chapel at Ma[r]sh Creek was dedicated. When completed, it will be a neat building, 32 feet by 42. It stands on an eminence, and is surrounded by nature's enchanting scenery. It is built on a portion of an acre of ground, presented to the society by Gen. Irvin and Col. Gregg.

Accounts of Pennsylvania Adventists provide further evidence that the movement allowed an active role for women, engaged in outreach to African Americans, targeted rural communities, and maintained connections with other nineteenth-century reform movements, including abolition, temperance, and eclectic medicine. Rather than disappearing after 1844, Millerites in Pennsylvania remained active into the twentieth century, providing an unbroken link to the new evangelical denominations that eventually replaced them.

Reprints of the journal article will be available by request (for a donation to defray printing costs).

Building and Grounds Committee Update

The Building and Grounds Committee, chaired by Don Wesley, helps keep the church in good repair. Solomon Zook was hired to replace damaged siding and stair rails and repair a hole in the eaves of the historic church. He also installed spouting and a new door on the museum and barn buildings. Special thanks to Dennis Reese, Harold Fetzer, Terren Smith, Connie and John Carr, and the Milesburg Historical Society for their help in clearing out the barn building so that it can be repurposed as a meeting and exhibition space for future programs. Thanks to everyone whose donations help sustain the property and support the ongoing work and mission of the Advent Historical Society.
